Scores of top global law firms, international organizations, world-renowned cultural enterprises, corporations, and financial institutions call New York home.

Why? This is where multimillion-dollar deals come together, where sweeping social and cultural developments originate, and where major players from every nation converge. They're here for the same reason you are: limitless possibilities.

The best and brightest in their fields regularly share their invaluable expertise and insights at NYU Law events. World leaders, captains of industry, cutting-edge entrepreneurs—you never know whom you'll meet. It could be the US national cyber director, the president of Microsoft, or a past president of the International Criminal Court—all of whom spoke at NYU Law events recently.

Whether you want to pursue international law at the United Nations, help create financial headlines working in the mergers and acquisitions group of a global law firm, engage in patent litigation, or work to shape important policy decisions, this is the place to translate your aspirations into action.

CLOSE CONNECTIONS

A young woman with long brown hair, wearing a green zip-up jacket, sits on the left, looking towards a young man on the right. The man has dark hair, wears glasses, and a blue button-down shirt. He is holding an open book and looking down at it. They are sitting on a stone ledge outdoors, with a background of lush green trees and foliage. The lighting is soft and natural, suggesting a sunny day.

Both inside and outside the Law School's walls, you'll find a vibrant community.

The NYU Law campus isn't isolated from the surrounding area. It's an integral part of the urban environment, with all the energy of the Greenwich Village neighborhood.

If you leave the tree-shaded courtyard of NYU Law's Vanderbilt Hall and cross West 4th Street, you'll find Washington Square Park, one of the most famous public spaces in New York. Lined by Greek Revival townhouses on its north side and dominated by the iconic Washington Square Arch, the park offers an unobstructed view up Fifth Avenue to the Empire State Building and beyond. Venture outside the park and you'll find no shortage of top-notch restaurants representing almost any cuisine you can think of, not to mention historical sites, shopping—from bargain to high-end—and world-class museums and theater of every kind.

Within the Law School itself, you can take advantage of unlimited opportunities to meet classmates with similar interests. With dozens of student organizations, it doesn't matter whether you're interested in intellectual property, the environment, business, or immigrant rights—you can find your niche here.

AT HOME

Many LLM students live in one of our apartment buildings.

If you like the idea of a five-minute commute to your classes, NYU Law has its own high-rise apartment buildings with a variety of living arrangements.

Studio and one-bedroom apartment options are available, as well as private bedrooms in shared two- or three-bedroom apartments. Family housing accommodations (in the form of studio and one-bedroom apartments) are also available, but limited in quantity.

SAGE ADVICE

The NYU Law Graduate Division's administrators, along with the faculty, are your constant resources during your graduate legal studies.

You want to get the most out of your time at NYU, and the Graduate Division will make every effort to ensure you do.

The Office of Graduate Affairs offers academic advising, supportive programming, and community-building events, along with advice on how best to take advantage of all the available resources throughout NYU Law and the larger University. Academic advisers will guide you in planning the best curriculum for you, keeping your professional goals in mind. Graduate Affairs administrators work to connect students with resources and with one another, and to integrate the LLM class into the life of the Law School and the University.

In addition to administrators, faculty members are wonderful sources for mentoring in your academic and professional pursuits. The faculty director of your degree program can guide you to the intellectual and vocational resources most relevant to your unique interests. Often, faculty work with students on individual projects that further enrich the learning experience.

FACULTY EXPERTS

NYU Law's dynamic and intellectually curious professors are the lifeblood of the school.

The Law School's nearly 100 full-time faculty members are among the top scholars in their fields. For example:

STEPHEN CHOI

focuses on the theoretical and empirical analysis of corporations and capital markets.

HELEN SCOTT

has helped develop and co-teaches a number of innovative law and business courses, including Law and Business of Corporate Governance.

FLORENCIA MAROTTA-WURGLER '01 focuses in her teaching and research on contracts, consumer privacy, electronic commerce, and law and economics.

MELISSA MURRAY

is a leading expert in family law, constitutional law, and reproductive rights and justice, and focuses in her research on the legal regulation of intimate life.

GRÁINNE DE BÚRCA

specializes in European Union law and international and transnational governance, with particular focus on EU law and governance, human rights law, and international organizations.

KATHERINE STRANDBURG

is focused in her research on the implications of user and collaborative innovation for patent law and of Big Data for privacy law.

YOUR FELLOW STUDENTS

NYU Law's classrooms are truly cosmopolitan.

In each of the past few years, we've welcomed LLM students from more than 50 countries.

Such international diversity will make your legal education, not to mention your social and professional experiences, richer and more rewarding. Through your courses, as well as through the many close-knit Law School communities and schoolwide events, you'll find ample opportunity to forge strong bonds, share worldviews, trade legal philosophies, and embrace different cultures and norms.

"My fellow LLM students came from all over the world, with many kinds of cultural backgrounds, but we had much in common. While I expected to encounter smart people, I found they were also friendly and helpful rather than academically competitive. I built great friendships that will surely last a lifetime."

DR. JULIUS HENNEBERG LLM '21
(GERMANY)

LEARNING UNITED STATES LAW

All LLM students from non-US law schools begin with introductory courses in American law.

Many preeminent global law firms are based in the United States or the United Kingdom, many international tribunals use a hybrid of civil and common law, and common law frequently applies to international contracts. For these reasons, lawyers who work on transnational disputes and transactions need to understand the basics of US law.

Introduction to US Law and Introduction to US Legal Practice are NYU Law's intensive, mandatory, two-week courses giving non-US lawyers an overview of the US legal system's fundamentals, such as federalism, common law methodology, and aspects of civil litigation. You'll learn how to dissect complicated cases, and how to interpret related cases in the same subject area to see how law evolves. These classes also cover the basics of legal research, how to cite to authority, and how to prepare for US law school exams. NYU Law gives lawyers trained outside the US a head start toward the bar exam by offering these introductory classes before the fall semester begins. Students with a qualifying foreign law degree can count the two introductory classes toward the requirements for eligibility to sit for the New York State bar exam, allowing for a more flexible course schedule during the academic year. We also strongly recommend that, during the academic year, students take Graduate Lawyering, a course that teaches real-world practice skills and the craft of lawyering; it, too, helps LLMs prepare for the bar exam and partially fulfills bar eligibility requirements.

In addition to these courses, a non-credit, three-session Legal English class is offered at the start of the fall semester. LLM students can also participate in weekly English conversation groups offered by the University.

“The introductory courses were really useful for understanding legal terminology and how US law works. They helped prepare me for my regular courses, contributed toward my eligibility to take the New York State bar exam, and were a great way to meet a wide cross-section of fellow LLM students from many countries as we all began to explore our new environment.”

LUCY LEVI LLM '22 (GREECE)

A COMPREHENSIVE CURRICULUM

Gain a strong practical understanding of business transactions.

Our transactional courses, available to all LLM students, are particularly popular for those specializing in Competition, Innovation and Information Law; Corporation Law; International Business Regulation, Litigation and Arbitration; and International Taxation. You'll study how real-life transactions were structured and negotiated. Lawyers who took part in the deals being studied often help teach the class. There's no better way for you to learn how to be an effective business lawyer than by analyzing the actual documents involved in deals that are shaping US and global business activity.

Become a skilled practitioner and advocate.

NYU Law is widely recognized for its excellence in clinical legal education, particularly for how it combines analytical skills with practical training, client relations management, and real-life ethical considerations. You can access this hands-on training in a variety of clinics, specialized seminars, and simulations (in which you'll act out the tasks of lawyering and then view, critique, and analyze the recorded performance). It's an excellent opportunity for you to work in small groups of students with our clinical, lawyering, and adjunct faculty to gain experience in skills such as drafting briefs and memos, conducting trials or negotiations, and working with clients.

Work directly with a professor on substantial legal scholarship.

The feedback of faculty who are experts in their fields is invaluable to your academic development. Generate a substantial original work under the supervision of a professor by pursuing a directed research project or writing an LLM thesis.

Broaden your law school education by exploring other disciplines.

Apart from the many NYU Law courses available to you, take advantage of the vast academic resources of the larger University by enrolling in a limited number of law-related classes at NYU's other prestigious schools, such as the Stern School of Business and the Wagner Graduate School of Public Service.

Learn how you take the next step in your career by establishing New York State bar eligibility.

If you wish to sit for the New York State bar exam, NYU Law offers guidance to assist you in determining whether you are eligible. As a foreign-trained lawyer, you may need to take particular classes as part of your LLM degree in order to sit for the exam. More than 50 Law School classes have been approved to count toward these requirements. Many of these classes also fulfill LLM specialization requirements so that you can study the topics that matter most to you while working toward bar exam eligibility. We can also help with satisfying the pro bono requirement during your time at NYU, or extending your stay in Law School housing for the months before the July exam.

COLLOQUIA

If you are seeking the most rigorous intellectual experience available in a classroom, NYU Law's colloquia are for you.

A series of open workshops that explore the latest scholarship on a given subject, each colloquium session features a leading authority who is invited to present a recent paper or work-in-progress. Faculty, students, and guests then discuss and debate the ideas and arguments in the presented work. In 2022–23, the 15 colloquium offerings include the following:

Colloquium on Constitutional Theory
Colloquium on Culture and Law
Colloquium on Law, Economics, and Politics
Colloquium on Law, Economics, and Politics of Urban Affairs
Colloquium on Law and Security
Colloquium in Legal, Political, and Social Philosophy
Contract Theory and Law Colloquium
Guarini Colloquium: Regulating Global Digital Corporations
Hauser Colloquium: Taking Duties Seriously: Public Duties, Social Justice, and the Protection of the Environment
Innovation Policy Colloquium
Law and Development Colloquium
Legal History Colloquium
Race and Inequality Colloquium
Tax Policy and Public Finance Colloquium
US-Asia Law Institute Colloquium: Globalization, International Law, and East Asia Law

The Guarini Colloquium: Regulating Global Digital Corporations examines the role that global internet corporations such as Amazon, Apple, Facebook, Google, Microsoft, and Twitter have played in shaping the transnational digital order, and also considers the increasing regulatory pushback. The colloquium has been taught by Professor Benedict Kingsbury, Professor J.H.H. Weiler, and Adjunct Professor Thomas Streinz LL.M. '15. Kingsbury is faculty director of the Guarini Institute for Global Legal Studies, which raises to a new level the international law programs and initiatives that have made NYU Law a leader in global legal innovation. The institute's Guarini Global Law & Tech program is a platform for in-depth interdisciplinary study, practice, and exploration of legal and regulatory issues and the transformation of legal practice in the global digital landscape.

Graduate students benefit from the variety and excellence of NYU Law's centers and institutes, where students, faculty, and outside experts collaborate.

You can pursue your interests through more than 30 research centers and institutes, which encourage student involvement through courses, academic programs, conferences, and fellowships, and provide opportunities such as drafting amicus briefs or writing comments on proposed regulations.

Master of Laws

Enjoy maximum freedom and flexibility in choosing courses that match your interests. Create your own LLM degree path.

FACULTY DIRECTOR

Kevin Davis

FACULTY

Choose courses taught by our nearly 100 full-time faculty members, plus lawyers and judges on the adjunct faculty, professors at other NYU graduate schools, and non-US global faculty who teach courses drawing on their expertise in foreign and international law.

THE NYU LAW APPROACH

Opting for the Master of Laws program allows you to choose courses in such diverse fields as constitutional law, corporate and securities law, economic analysis of law, environmental law, intellectual property, labor law, immigration law, international business transactions, domestic and international criminal law and procedure, and international human rights law. Select from more than 350 courses, plus approved classes at other NYU graduate schools.

INTELLECTUAL LIFE

The LLM experience is about not just academics but also the opportunity to engage in high-level discussions and attend lectures with notable practitioners, academics, and professionals. Additionally, the Law School hosts many visiting legal scholars who enrich our community through all kinds of lectures, seminars, and workshops. You can also take advantage of the many organizations that contribute to NYU Law's intellectual community:

30+ centers and institutes

80+ student organizations

10 student journals

10+ colloquia

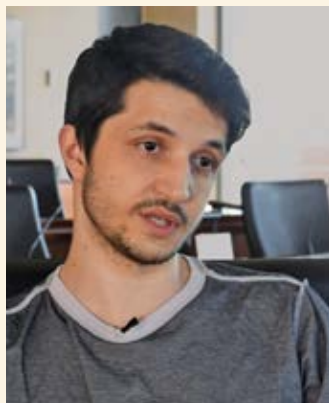

Lectures on topics such as public interest, law and business, and tax

Numerous conferences and symposia

OPPORTUNITIES TO WRITE

Although there is no writing requirement, we strongly encourage you to take at least one seminar in which you must prepare a substantial research paper. In addition, you'll have the opportunity to expand a research assignment into a faculty-supervised thesis, allowing you to benefit from working with an expert in your field of interest.

“Two things about NYU Law really stood out to me. First, the classes that I took had a mix of JDs and LLMs; we weren't separated. Also, the NYU Law faculty is second to none. You'll be sitting in class reading one of the most complex cases in the history of a particular area of law, and you'll realize that the professor teaching you actually litigated that case.”

“Trademark and False Advertising Law with Professor Barton Beebe was a great class. I had learned about trademark in my home jurisdiction as part of a broader study of intellectual property, but having a focused course on trademark was very exciting. Professor Beebe made the class fun and engaging, relating it to new and relevant topics. I enjoyed the energy he brought to the classroom and his openness to different viewpoints.”

INTERDISCIPLINARY

In our transactional and law and business courses, you closely analyze how real-life transactions were structured and negotiated. In some cases, the lawyers who worked on the deal being studied help to teach the course.

To combine your legal knowledge with business know-how, you can choose from a sampling of courses at the Stern School of Business, where you'll study alongside MBA students. The Pollack Center for Law & Business, a joint venture of the Law School and Stern, is dedicated to providing an interdisciplinary legal and business education for the academic community, as well as for experienced legal and business practitioners.

FOR THE MOST UP-TO-DATE LIST OF COURSES AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS, VISIT LAW.NYU.EDU/LLMJSD/CORPORATIONLAW

YOU MAY ALSO CONCURRENTLY COMPLETE THE ADVANCED CERTIFICATE IN LAW AND BUSINESS THROUGH THE POLLACK CENTER FOR LAW & BUSINESS.

"The Corporation Law LLM program allowed a lot of flexibility to choose courses that interested me. It's very important for a corporate lawyer to combine different kinds of knowledge with law in order to communicate and cooperate with professionals from different backgrounds and fields. Apart from attaining that knowledge, I gained experience abroad, had extensive exposure to US law and business concepts, and made valuable networking connections."

CLINICAL OPTIONS

LLM students can apply to clinics that offer both seminar and fieldwork components. For example, in the United Nations Diplomacy Clinic, you have the opportunity to work in the UN missions of small island developing states for whom climate change, fisheries, and oceans are often high priorities. In the Earth Rights Advocacy Clinic, you'll work on projects targeting existential challenges to environmental justice and human rights, including the climate emergency and the destruction of biodiversity and ecosystems.

COURSE OFFERINGS

NYU Law's flexible core curriculum allows you to pursue your specific interests in environmental, energy, and land use law. Examine how environmental law intersects with business, human rights, Indigenous communities, innovation, and social enterprise. Delve into food law and policy, animal law, and environmental justice. Learn firsthand from leading energy law practitioners who are experts in the regulation of energy, financing energy infrastructure, and the transition to renewable energy sources.

"I was interested in how environmental law and finance intersect. SUPERIOR COURSE CHOICES

Choose from the largest and most varied selection of classes in international tax law available at any US law school, including courses on international taxation, tax treaties, international tax policy, and regional systems of taxation. You can also opt to take courses in other areas of US taxation.

A highlight of the curriculum is Taxation of International Business Transactions, in which you study a proposed three-country transaction. As part of a three-person team, you'll perform original research and prepare a written proposal for the most tax-efficient structuring of the transaction—with students each representing their home countries. Teams benefit from a faculty supervisor as well as an outside adviser, usually an international tax specialist at a New York or Washington, DC, firm.

MEET THE EXPERTS

The International Tax Program is advised by a Practice Council of distinguished tax practitioners from 27 different countries, some of whom are alumni of the program. Council members promote the program abroad, participate in seminars at the Law School, and advise on curriculum development to ensure the relevance and excellence of your academic experience. Tax experts—members of the council as well as others—will also be invited to have lunch with you as part of the International Tax Program Lunch Lecture Series. The council and the series represent valuable opportunities to network with professional contacts as you explore future career options around the globe.

FOR THE MOST UP-TO-DATE LIST OF COURSES AND DEGREE REQUIREMENTS, VISIT LAW.NYU.EDU/LLMJSD/INTERNATIONALTAXATION

"The tax courses are second to none. So many accomplished attorneys I've encountered in New York took the same courses I did, often with the same professors. I was taught by practicing lawyers renowned in their field, and the program is small enough that it was easy to connect with faculty. Alumni from all over the world regularly visited to speak with us informally, underscoring how close-knit the network remains, even years after graduates studied here."

THE NYU LAW APPROACH

We construe “legal theory” broadly to include scholarly reflection on domestic and international law and legal institutions, drawing on philosophy, economic theory, political theory, psychology, anthropology, critical race theory, feminist theory, history, and sociology.

You can take up to six credits in other graduate divisions of the University with the approval of the program director and the vice dean.

OPPORTUNITIES TO WRITE

In courses of your choice, you will have a variety of options for writing. As a formal requirement, you will write a substantive paper in close consultation with a faculty expert, but there are other opportunities as well. You will engage actively in the workshop process with your classmates, benefiting from NYU Law’s culture of collaborative scholarship.

“The Legal Theory LLM introduced me to crucial methodologies, theories, and scholarly debates. I learned how to look at the law through an interdisciplinary lens that encompasses ethnography, historiography, and other areas of scholarship. Some of the foremost thinkers in their disciplines taught me how to engage in comparative legal research and hone my written arguments, leaving me well prepared to pursue a JSD and an academic career.”

FACULTY ADVICE AND SUGGESTED CURRICULA

Full-time students are assigned a full-time tax professor with whom they can discuss their academic interests and career goals. You can rely, too, on our suggested courses of study for careers with a focus on Business Taxation, Estate Planning, International Taxation (for US-trained attorneys), and Tax Policy. We also offer tax courses on subjects such as Executive Compensation, Multistate Taxation, Private Equity, and Mergers and Acquisitions.

PART-TIME OPTIONS

If you're a practicing lawyer, you can pursue an LLM in Taxation part-time, benefiting from some evening classes taught by the nation's leading tax practitioners, intensive tax courses offered during the summer, and some online classes.

Also offered part-time:

Executive LLM in Taxation, an entirely online program

Advanced Professional Certificate in Taxation, 12-credit programs of advanced tax classes in specific areas of concentration

“Because tax law is so technical, it's really important to understand how the tax code works, but also where to look to find answers to your questions. The Taxation LLM program provided me with a strong foundation of knowledge as well as a robust network of fellow alumni. Both of those resources are great assets for my career.”

JSD PROGRAM

FACULTY DIRECTOR

J.H.H. Weiler

Receive intense training in academic research, especially useful for pursuing a career in academia. The program assists you in producing first-class scholarship and securing a teaching position in the US or elsewhere.

OVERVIEW

The four-year JSD Program centers on the writing of a dissertation under the supervision of a full-time faculty member. The writing occurs in two stages: the candidacy paper, completed in the first year, and the dissertation, completed after your admission to candidacy.

The JSD committee exercises a preference for NYU LL.M.s in admissions. JSD candidates receive a scholarship for tuition and registration fees for required courses, student health insurance, conference travel funding, plus a three-to-four-year stipend, conditional upon satisfactory academic progress.

THE CANDIDACY PAPER

During the first year, you'll write a candidacy paper of 15,000 to 20,000 words (exclusive of footnotes) stating your thesis and demonstrating both the originality and importance of your project and your ability to carry the project through to completion.

THE DISSERTATION

You'll produce a significant scholarly contribution to the field in the form of a monograph or book of 80,000 to 100,000 words, or, if approved in advance, a series of substantial papers or law review articles.

INTELLECTUAL LIFE

The JSD Forum, a workshop, meets approximately every other week; students present their work in progress to their peers. The forum is attended by all JSD students, candidates, faculty advisers and commentators, NYU fellows, and visiting doctoral researchers.

"The JSD Program fosters a collegial environment in which you and your fellow candidates share your work and feedback as well as information about resources and opportunities. The JSD Forum, where we present our ongoing work, is robust and engaging. The program also offers skill sessions that help prepare you to make a positive impact as a scholar at an academic institution!"

THE PROGRAM AT A GLANCE

Year One

Complete one legal theory thesis seminar and one methodological seminar preapproved by the faculty adviser and the JSD Committee.

Conduct preliminary research with a view toward consolidating research questions, hypotheses, and methodology for the dissertation.

Prepare and submit a candidacy paper to your dissertation supervisor to gain admission to JSD candidacy.

Year Two

Continue your research and begin drafting your dissertation.

Complete one colloquium.

Determine potential dissertation committee members; present your recommendations to the chair of the JSD committee; ensure the appointment of the committee members.

Years Three and Four

Draft and revise your dissertation, supplementing with additional research as needed.

Defend your dissertation orally before your dissertation committee.

A WORLD STAGE

Just glance at the names and topics of some NYU Law events from the past few years, and you'll get a sense of the Law School's significance as a platform for dialogues of global importance.

Our faculty and student event organizers frequently invite our eminent guests into small groups for more intimate conversations with students.

JOBS AND FELLOWSHIPS

Administrators in the Office of Career Services, the Public Interest Law Center, and the Academic Careers Program provide comprehensive assistance for students and alumni seeking private- and public-sector jobs and teaching positions.

You'll get one-on-one career counseling and résumé assistance from counselors who are familiar with your particular concerns as an LLM student. In-depth workshops on job search and interview skills, career panel discussions, access to job announcements and employer research resources, and both on- and off-campus interview programs help give you an edge in finding the right job for you. Visit law.nyu.edu/llm_careerservices

Key career events include:

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT INTERVIEW PROGRAM

Thirty-three law schools sponsor this annual consortium at NYU Law, where 1,600 students from more than 75 countries can connect with more than 160 employers offering internships and permanent positions in the US and abroad.

TAXATION INTERVIEW PROGRAM AND TAX ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEW PROGRAMS

Take advantage of on-campus interviews with employers—exclusively for tax LLM students—and participate in the nation's premier job fair for graduate tax students.

The Law School provides unique opportunities for LLM students to apply for funded postgraduate internships, fellowships, and clerkships.

Through the International Finance and Development Fellowship and International Law and Human Rights Fellowship programs, students can apply for short-term positions at intergovernmental organizations and nonprofits in the United States and abroad, including the World Bank, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the United Nations, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, and the International Center for Transitional Justice. The three-month LLM Public Interest Fellowship allows students to work at a public interest organization of their choosing in the US or abroad.

The Law School also funds a 10-month clerkship at the International Court of Justice, and year-long international human rights project fellowships in developing countries through the Arthur Helton Global Human Rights Fellowship.

Your time as a student is temporary; your community's support is not.

One of the most valuable aspects of your NYU Law degree is that it places you in a worldwide network of more than 45,000 alumni who are leaders in their fields, whether that's private legal practice, finance, government, or the corporate world.

You'll have the opportunity to meet many of these alumni during your time as a student when they return to campus to teach, lecture, or participate in panels. And after you leave the Law School, you'll find alumni chapters with fellow NYU Law graduates in cities around the globe.

“New York City is a microcosm of the world. It is a melting pot of every nationality, of every race. You realize that we are one human family. I came to realize that, living in New York.”

MOHAMED ELBARADEI LL.M. '71, J.S.D. '74, LL.D. '04

Former vice president of Egypt and founder of Egypt's Constitution Party, ElBaradei was director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency from 1997 to 2009 and an adjunct professor of international law at NYU from 1981 to 1987. In 2005, he won the Nobel Peace Prize.
