Grunin Center for Law and Social Entrepreneurship at NYU Law

The Grunin Center was launched in May 2017 through the generous support of NYU School of Law graduates Jay Grunin '67 and Linda Kalmanowitz Grunin '67 and the Jay and Linda Grunin Foundation. The mission of the Grunin Center is to enhance the community of lawyers and legal institutions engaged in social entrepreneurship and impact investing and to accelerate their effective participation in these fields. In fulfilling its mission, the Grunin Center is committed to engaging in activities that will: 1) educate students and practicing lawyers about legal issues in the field of social entrepreneurship and impact investing, 2) disseminate knowledge and research about law and policy developments in this field, and 3) collaborate with other field-building organizations, universities (and law schools), and research centers. To follow the educational activities, events, research, resource library, and collaborations of the Grunin Center, go to <https://www.law.nyu.edu/centers/grunin-social-entrepreneurship>.

Room 1—Morning Plenary

Sustainable Value Creation: Making It Real

This plenary is situated against the backdrop of recent discussions about rearticulating the purpose of the corporation to focus on the longer-term perspective of managers, investors, and workers, and on the increasing number of statements from business on social and political issues. This plenary's speakers will examine what has to happen to make these statements real. How can we operationalize a commitment to sustainable value creation net of externalities through respectful treatment of stakeholders and society? What does it really mean to align business models and actions with the values businesses are espousing? And, what is the role of the legal profession in advancing these conversations?

CREATING RESPONSIBLE EXITS AND RESTRUCTURINGS

Responsible Exits: Structuring and Managing Exits to Support Mission Preservation

Designing investments requires thinking ahead to how the investment will end—structuring an exit that takes into account legal rights applicable to both parties, policy objectives, and the market reality at the time of the exit. Often, the market reality may be different at the time of exit than the parties had anticipated. That has never been more true than in 2021, after 12+ months of a global pandemic that has had a material economic impact worldwide. What new exit possibilities and tools are being used to adjust? Are investors modifying legal rights, and social impact targets or extending investments to provide more time for the market to rebound? This panel will examine practical exit strategies being used by those coming to the end of an investment and those thinking ahead to new investments.

Looking Back & Moving Forward: Tackling Twin Crises, Rebuilding, and Reimagining through Social Entrepreneurship

The pandemic has laid bare what many Americans have known from living it every day. Inequitable systems fuel state-sanctioned violence. Capital is syphoned from disadvantaged communities to wealthy areas, even as the negative impacts of business hit disadvantaged communities with disproportionate intensity. And the country has seen a historic attack on civil liberties, in both the streets and the halls of policy. With the world turning to “recovery,” how do we ensure that innovation drives lasting systemic change and does not continue to exacerbate it? In this plenary session, Cheryl Dorsey will discuss the role of social entrepreneurship as we reimagine and rebuild the world amid a pandemic and nationwide racial reckoning.

CERTIFYING AND REGULATING IMPACT

Disclosing Impact in the US: From Voluntary to Mandatory Regimes?

As investors increasingly focus on the environmental and social impacts of public and private companies, reporting frameworks and voluntary disclosures have proliferated. This panel will explore such questions as: How are private equity impact funds handling certification and disclosure issues? What role might SASB play in defining the impacts that will be measured and disclosed? And how might impact investors shape anticipated regulations from the SEC mandating environmental and social disclosures?

GROWING THE SKILLS AND EXPANDING THE MINDSETS OF OUR LEGAL COMMUNITY

Practicing and Shaping the Law in the Era of Impact

This session will explore how the practice of law has evolved as the fields of social entrepreneurship and impact investing have become more mainstream. Drawing on the experience of seasoned practitioners, policymakers, and legal academics, panelists will discuss new ways in which lawyers across practice areas (and beyond law firms) are expanding the scope of their work to meet the needs of these growing fields. Panelists will also examine what resources and tools are available or needed to support and upskill them.

Morning Plenary

Tackling the Climate Crisis with Law through Global Investment

The world is facing a dual crisis of rapid climate change and unprecedented biodiversity loss. The climate is becoming more volatile and extreme. Longer, more intense droughts threaten crops, wildlife, and freshwater supplies; and extreme weather events are creating more floods and fires. Nature is declining at an unprecedented rate, and many species face extinction. Without urgent action, our global economy and our planet's diversity of life are at risk, and significant harm to people and planet is inevitable. There is hope for the future, however. We must act now through the rapid decarbonization of the global economy and by investing in our natural capital systems. President Biden's recent Leaders Summit on Climate has reset the global economic agenda, with government-led commitments backing enhanced policy and regulation, now rapidly accelerating the shift to a net zero global economy closer to 2040 and resulting in significant economic disruption and opportunity. Over the next 15 years alone, $100 trillion will be required to decarbonize the global economy and protect nature. There is a race to build and deliver the investment opportunities that are required. This presents the most significant investment opportunity of our lifetime. Those countries, corporations, and investors that act now will achieve the highest returns and the greatest impact. This session will look at opportunities for investing in the net zero economy and the role of law and policy in driving this.

Restructurings and Redesign in Stressed Markets

Over recent years, investors and investees have encountered exogenous events, such as earthquakes, hurricanes, and the recent COVID-19 pandemic. These events have presented challenges and opportunities. Many investments are being restructured to bring relief to investees and prevent investments from going into default. Other transactions are being redesigned on the front end as development finance institutions and other investors are creating new facilities and adopting novel approaches to make investments work in a new environment. This panel will look at how restructuring and redesign are being employed in stressed markets to support the communities served by impact investments. The panel will also explore how impact investors balance supporting their clients with their financial obligations to their stakeholders, and will look at the increased risk that accompanies investment into stressed markets, compensation for higher risk, and use of concessional financing.

Learning By Doing—Considering the Modern Legal Apprenticeship

A core concern for modern lawyers stems from a time-worn controversy—the perceived “disconnect” between the pedagogy of legal education and the realities of legal practice. In this session, we will consider the role of practical experience in law school and beyond, as well as opportunities for practitioners to participate in the academic experience. Panelists will engage in a discussion of the rich learning opportunities that social entrepreneurship ventures can provide to students and new attorneys.

PUTTING A LENS ON IMPACT INVESTMENTS

Fiduciary Duty in the Impact Sector

Creating and emphasizing financial returns is an important principle in any investment, but is it possible to adequately address social equity issues when the historical fiduciary obligation to maximize returns is still central to the impact structure? This session will discuss the mismatch of the application of fiduciary duties imposed by law or contract on an investor, fund sponsor, investment advisor, and board member as they navigate the development and implementation of an impact investment strategy and purpose. The panelists will discuss the challenges of structuring and diligencing diverse impact transactions when return-driven fiduciary duty is prioritized.

Building Communities, Changing Lives: How a CDFI Is Using Finance to Deliver Sustainable Economic, Social, and Environmental Impact Locally and Around the World

Founded more than 30 years ago, Southern Bancorp, Inc. is one of the largest and first certified rural Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFIs) in the United States. With more than $1.9 billion in assets, 65,000 customers, and 52 locations across the Arkansas-Mississippi Delta, one of the nation's most persistently poor regions, Southern Bancorp focuses on the net worth building strategies of homeownership, entrepreneurship, and savings.

Led by lawyer, former legislator, and 2019 Grunin Prize Award judge Darrin Williams, Southern Bancorp has built one of the most mission-focused and profitable CDFIs in America. Recently, to raise more than $40 million in common equity to help build more resilient communities and improve the financial health of its customers, Southern Bancorp engaged with many of the conference's six themes—specifically, simplifying its capital structure, installing mechanisms to preserve and measure the company's mission, and committing to and adopting policies to ensure current financial returns and long-term liquidity with responsible exits for its shareholders. Williams will discuss how his legal experience benefits and influences his decision-making as Southern Bancorp's CEO. He will share how Southern Bancorp, a locally focused social enterprise, is connected to a global values-based banking movement that seeks to transform the financial system to support economic, social, and environmental sustainability.
